We are delighted to announce that a new established research centre, The Psychology and Health Research Centre (PAHRC) has been established and will become the 10th Centre/Unit at the Institute for Lifecourse & Society (ILAS) at the University of Galway.

PAHRC aims to advance research at the intersection of psychology, health and wellbeing. Its goal is to improve health outcomes across the life course and reduce health inequalities by building on the University's existing research strengths.

The Centre will bring researchers together to develop innovative research methods, design and evaluate evidence-based interventions, inform health policy and practice, and build international research partnerships. It will also promote collaboration with patients, the public and diverse communities to ensure research responds to real-world health needs.

At ILAS, we look forward to welcoming our new Centre colleagues to the Institute and to the many opportunities for collaboration this will bring.

Prof. Caroline McGregor, Director of the Institute for Lifecourse and Society welcomes new Psychology and Health Research Centre (PAHRC) members, Dr Jenny McSharry and Prof. Gerry Molloy to ILAS.
